

TYCO WATER NEW ZEALAND CELEBRATES 10 YEARS

This month Tyco Water celebrates the milestone of ten successful years operating in New Zealand. The journey began back in late 2000, when Tyco Water employed the services of Ian Jacob, an experienced pipeline operations manager to head up operations in the country and teamed up with a few eager sales reps, the business came to life.

Looking to establish a base in the country, Tyco Water acquired the reputable pipeline supply company, Prebensen Pipelines. Tyco Water New Zealand combined Prebensen's local knowledge with Tyco Water's Australian manufacturing expertise to bring an unparalleled range of pipeline products to the country.

Since that time, Tyco Water has rolled out five Customer Centres across the country to ensure that all of their customers are treated to fast and reliable service for all of their pipeline needs. The Customer Centres are located in each of the New Zealand's major centres, namely Auckland, Wellington, Christchurch, Hamilton and Dunedin.

Barbeque lunches were held across the Centres as team members gathered to celebrate the sustained success of Tyco Water New Zealand. Original team members Darrell Tonge and Ross Buddle were among those in attendance for the event, delighting staff with stories of the old days.
