

TYCO WATER CONTINUES PROVIDING AUSTRALIAN JOBS

While other companies continue to source products from overseas, it is refreshing to see that Tyco Water is extending, its already significant, commitment to Australian manufacturing. Included in this commitment to Australian manufacturing is the fact that Tyco Water continues to provide 950 Australian jobs. A leading supplier to the Australian water industry, Tyco Water believes that its innovative Australian workforce has enabled the company to continue setting industry standards, through the creation of world leading products, such as SINTAKOTE Steel Pipeline Systems.

Tyco Water has used its 950 strong Australian workforce to drive much of the company's recent prosperity. "Our company's recent prosperity has enabled growth and as a result Tyco Water has decided to increase its Australian manufacturing presence, by opening a new SINTAKOTE Steel Pipeline Systems manufacturing facility in Somerton, VIC." states Tyco Waters Marketing Engineer, Michael Loconte. By increasing its Australian manufacturing presence, Tyco Water is effectively ensuring that the benefits associated with the creation of market leading developments such as SINATKOTE, continue to fuel the Australian economy, along with ensuring there is a fruitful creation of jobs for future generations.

As overseas competitors begin to attack, Tyco Water will not compromise quality and therefore remains committed to using the innovative talents of its 950 strong Australian workforce to help shape the future of Australia's water industry.

For more information contact Josh Davis at jdavis@tycowater.com.au

Tyco Water is Australia's premier manufacturer and supplier of pipeline systems built on more than century of commitment to the country's water industry.